INTRODUCTION

Medical studies have always been subjected to a combination of various challenges and stresses. These have included difficulties emerging in the clinical, academic, social and personal functioning of the student who is often found in the deep without having developed an adequate ability to remain afloat, leave alone being in a position to enjoy and gainfully learn from the journey. This challenges our intention of producing Visionary leaders in the field of Medical Education, Care and Research through fostering enabling relationships between faculty and students. Evidence suggests that structured Mentoring programmes are extensively used in undergraduate education and in honing professional skills (Buddeberg-Fisher b. and Herta K, 2006).

Mentorship provides support for the student to seek and receive guidance from the more experienced and empathetic faculty who, having gone through the process themselves, are able to bring to bear a different, wider, deeper and perhaps a healthier perspective to the daily experiences which tend to drown the student. Mentoring can be described as 'a voluntary relationship, typically between two individuals, in which the mentor is usually an experienced, highly regarded, empathic individual, often working in the same organization, or field, as the mentee; the mentor, by listening and talking with the mentee in private and in confidence, guides the mentee in the development of his or her own ideas, learning, and personal and professional development' (Bligh, 1999). It no doubt helps students to succeed in their careers (Stamm Martina and Barbara Buddeberg-Fisher, 2011)

Mentorship program of any Institution has an individualistic flavor influenced partly by the predominant value base of the Institution and of its members as also by the personalities of the mentor and the mentee. All senior teaching faculties of MGM MCHA will act as mentors and guide students throughout MBBS program. Each mentor will have 1 student from each batch i.e. 5 students and the mentor will remain constant for the full duration of a student in the medical college of 5 years.

INTRODUCTION

Medical studies have always been subjected to a combination of various challenges and stresses. These have included difficulties emerging in the clinical, academic, social and personal functioning of the student who is often found in the deep without having developed an adequate ability to remain afloat, leave alone being in a position to enjoy and gainfully learn from the journey. This challenges our intention of producing Visionary leaders in the field of Medical Education, Care and Research through fostering enabling relationships between faculty and students. Evidence suggests that structured Mentoring programmes are extensively used in undergraduate education and in honing professional skills (Buddeberg-Fisher b. and Herta K, 2006).

Mentorship provides support for the student to seek and receive guidance from the more experienced and empathetic faculty who, having gone through the process themselves, are able to bring to bear a different, wider, deeper and perhaps a healthier perspective to the daily experiences which tend to drown the student. Mentoring can be described as 'a voluntary relationship, typically between two individuals, in which the mentor is usually an experienced, highly regarded, empathic individual, often working in the same organization, or field, as the mentee; the mentor, by listening and talking with the mentee in private and in confidence, guides the mentee in the development of his or her own ideas, learning, and personal and professional development'(Bligh, 1999). It no doubt helps students to succeed in their careers (Stamm Martina and Barbara Buddeberg-Fisher, 2011)

Mentorship program of any Institution has an individualistic flavor influenced partly by the predominant value base of the Institution and of its members as also by the personalities of the mentor and the mentee. All senior teaching faculties of MGM MCHA will act as mentors and guide students throughout MBBS program. Each mentor will have 1 student from each batch i.e. 5 students and the mentor will remain constant for the full duration of a student in the medical college of 5 years.
