Sensory Neural Deafness

This occurs as a result of damage of the cochlea or of the 8th cranial nerve. The degree of hearing impairment depends on the extent to which the structures are affected. When deafness occurs but to loss of the cochlear nuclei or their central connections, it is known as central deafness. It occurs rarely and is associated with varied neurological deficits.

The common causes of sensorineural deafness are:

1. Toxic degeneration of the hair cells caused by chronic treatment with drugs.

2. Genetic degeneration of the hair cells.

3. Damage to the outer hair cells by prolonged exposure to loud noise.

4. Tumors of the vestibulocochlear nerve (acoustic neuroma) or tumors in the cerebellopontine angle.

5. Trauma or stroke of the brain.

A 35-year-old male patient presents with a 2-week history of a progressive weight loss of approximately 10 kg. He also reports a low-grade fever, night sweats, and a persistent cough. He has a history of smoking and alcohol consumption. He is currently on no treatment.

The patient's physical examination reveals a thin, emaciated male with a temperature of 37.8°C, heart rate of 100 bpm, and respiratory rate of 18 rpm. There is a 2 cm x 2 cm, firm, non-tender, and non-adherent nodule in the right upper lobe of the lung. The rest of the physical examination is unremarkable.

The patient's chest X-ray shows a 2 cm x 2 cm, well-defined, cavitary lesion in the right upper lobe with a thick wall and a thin rim of consolidation. The rest of the chest X-ray is unremarkable.

The patient's sputum culture is positive for Mycobacterium tuberculosis. He is started on anti-tubercular therapy (ATT) with isoniazid, rifampin, pyrazinamide, and ethambutol. He is also given vitamin B6 and pyridoxine. He is followed up for 6 months.

- A 33-year-old man is seen by a cardiologist for chest pain lasting for a few minutes on unprovoked occasions for the past 3 weeks.
- After a detailed history and physical examination, the doctor orders an ECG, which was normal. His father had an aortic aneurysm that which showed reversible ischemia.
- The doctor orders an echocardiogram. At the time, the patient requests that he would like to have a second opinion.
- The cardiologist explains that he has done everything correctly and that the patient would benefit by angiogram.
- The patient tells her that he cannot make a decision unless he talks to his family member of 20 years. The cardiologist is reluctant and tells the patient that he does not need to see the patient any longer.

What is a fiduciary relationship?

- The Hippocratic oath expresses the essence of the fiduciary relationship between a physician and each of his patients.
- The physician has a duty to act in the patient's best interest and to refrain from exploiting the patient.
- Respecting the fiduciary relationship and the trust of the patient is a cornerstone of the ethical physician's practice.

 THE YEAR 2023-24

A 35-year-old male patient presents with a 2-week history of a progressive weight loss of approximately 10 kg. He also reports a 1-month history of low-grade fever, night sweats, and coughing up blood-tinged sputum. He has a 10-year history of smoking 20 cigarettes per day and a 5-year history of alcohol consumption. He has no known chronic illnesses and is on no regular medications.

The patient's physical examination reveals a thin, cachectic male with a temperature of 38.2°C, a heart rate of 100 bpm, and a respiratory rate of 18 bpm. There is a 2-cm diameter, well-circumscribed, firm, nontender nodule in the right upper lobe of the lung. The rest of the physical examination is unremarkable.

The patient's chest X-ray shows a 2-cm diameter, well-circumscribed, nodular opacity in the right upper lobe. The rest of the chest X-ray is unremarkable.

The patient's laboratory investigations are as follows: Hemoglobin 12 g/dl, Total RBC count 4.5 million/cmm, Hematocrit 38%, Hematocrit index 84%, Hemoglobin index 100%, Hemoglobin concentration 100%, Hemoglobin content 100%, Hemoglobin index 100%, Hemoglobin concentration 100%, Hemoglobin content 100%.

Phase 2

- A 33-year-old man is seen by a cardiologist for chest pain lasting for a few minutes on unprovoked occasions for the past 3 weeks.
- After a detailed history and physical examination, the doctor orders an ECG which was normal. He further orders an exercise stress test which showed reversible ischemia.
- The doctor orders an angiogram. At the time, the patient requests that he would like to have a second opinion.
- The cardiologist explains that he has done everything correctly and that the patient indeed requires an angiogram.
- The patient believes that he cannot make a decision unless he talks to his family member of 20 years. The cardiologist is reluctant and tells the patient that he does not need to see the young lady longer.

Aim

The workshop focuses to equip the participants with early identification of arrhythmias and management.

Objectives

1. To review the Anatomy and Physiology of heart
2. To describe the fundamentals of ECG
3. To develop skills in interpreting normal and abnormal Rhythms

Introduction

Nurses care for critically ill patients 24/7 in the intensive care units. In many occasions they come across patients developing life threatening arrhythmias. Nurses with adequate knowledge and skill would be able to recognize the arrhythmias and initiate appropriate interventions.

About us

MGM New Bombay College of Nursing, a constituent unit of MGM Institute of Health Sciences (Deemed to be University u/s 3 of UGC Act, 1956 Grade A Accredited by NAAC), laid its foundation in 2008. The College offers Undergraduate, Postgraduate & Ph.D programme in Nursing with realistic and successful access to higher education.

In the year 2016, recognizing the significant expansion in tertiary care services, the Union Ministry of Health and Family Welfare launched Nurse Practitioner in Critical Care (NPCC) Post Graduate Programme. MGM New Bombay College of Nursing started the competency based NPCC programme as one among the pioneering institutes in India from 15 November 2017.
